COURSE ENTITLED 'WORK AND LABOR IN THE U.S.'
OFFERED SECOND SESSION AT UNIVERSITY OF MONTANA

MISSOULA--

Dr. Ronald F. Perrin, associate professor of philosophy at the University of Montana, will teach a course entitled "Work and Labor in the U.S." during the second 4½-week UM Summer Session, which begins Thursday, July 24.

The course, offered through the UM Center for Continuing Education and Summer Programs (CCESP), is available as a regular summer offering for either 3 graduate or undergraduate credits. The class will meet at 11 a.m. Monday through Friday beginning Thursday in room 302 of the UM Liberal Arts Building.

Through a historical survey of industrial labor in the U.S., students will explore the increasing subordination of the substance of labor to the labor process itself.

"It is my hope that students of history, political science, sociology and philosophy will find this course meaningful," Perrin said.

The second 4½-week UM Summer Session ends Aug. 22.

Dr. Patricia P. Douglas is CCESP director.
